JULY/AUGUST

As I write this article it is the first day of summer and I'm thinking....really? Because I'm ready for fall. If it was up to my husband we would not even use air conditioning at home but instead leave the windows open all summer. How does anyone do that? How did any of us (including me) live without air conditioners? We had one window unit when I was a child. It was a tiny unit in a large family room on the 1st floor of a huge 3 story house. Going upstairs to bed was like entering a sauna. Some nights I would cry while climbing the steps but my parents had no sympathy (maybe because they were in the same predicament?). It seemed 1000 degrees hotter after leaving that one cool room downstairs. My saving grace was the attic fan. Usually I would wake up a bit chilly during the night because the fan was so powerful (although I never admitted to that).

I hope you are able to stay cool this summer and enjoy some relaxing time with a tall glass of tea or lemonade. Have a safe July 4th!

In His Service, Chris
