

Holiday greetings from Christian Community Homecare. It looks as if colder weather is settling in. Time for chili, green bean casserole, ham and turkey. One great thing about this time of year is all the yummy food. Snuggling under warm covers at night is also wonderful-it's just difficult climbing out in the morning!

Thanksgiving in Kansas City with my siblings will be wonderful as we watch fireworks set to Christmas music over Longview Lake, eat too much turkey dinner, and join thousands of people to watch the plaza lights turn on and light up the mayor's tree. Tradition at the tree lighting calls for holding a candle while we sing Silent Night. This is an intimate moment which binds us together; strangers sharing this time, this place, this life.

May the light which comes from sharing one Lord, one God, light your life this season and all year through. My wish is that the birth of Christ fills your home with peace, joy, love of family, friends, and yes, even strangers.
